duiteau's Punishment.

To the Editor of the Chicago Journal: While the question of what shall he done with the assassin, Guiteau, is being discussed, please allow one more opinion to be expressed as to the disposal of the worthless creature whose crime has not only bereaved the American people but caused the deepest regret among all the nations of the earth. I would propose that his punishment be not death, for then it is possible his troubles would be ended; but I would have him put into a cage and transported back and forth over the United States—yea, over the world if need be-and let every one who ondemns his act be allowed to point passes along. Even a beast of the field under such treatment would soon have a perception that it was set apart for some awful purpose and would hide its face from the gaze of men; and despite the fact Guiteau has borne himself so far without the aid of a single proffer of interest or friendship from any human being since he fired the shot, it can scarcely be doubted that this punishment would give him some idea of the enormity of his crime and that he would sooner choose a Summer White and Colored Marseilles Vests, thousand deaths instead. The totally uncalled for, unprovoked and senseless act might well become a subject of special legislation, for it nceds some example besides that prescribed by the present laws to give to assassins the knowledge that

A succession of heavy-showers so delayed the procession that the lines had to be broken before reaching the cemetery, and files beside the avenue associations of the state department for early three miles made way for the funeral car. The state militia were stationed at the gates of the cemetery and along the drive ways to the vault. The steps to the vault were carpeted with flowers. At the entrance were an anchor of tube roses and a cross of white smilax with evergreens fastened take hold without any difficulty or emabove. A heavy black canopy stretched over the steps from which the exercises were conducted. At 3.30 the procession entered the gateway, which was appropriately decorated. In the keystone were the words, "Come to Rest." On one side, ' Lay Him to Rest Whom | We Have Learned to Love," on the other side, "Lay Him to Rest Whom We Have Learned to Trust." A massive evergreen cross was suspended from the centre of the arch.

The Marine Band, continuing the weet mournful strains it had left off during the march, entered first. Then came the Forest City Troop, of Cleveland, which escorted the president to his manguration. Then came the funeral car, with an escort of twelve artilguard of honor comprised all of the followed by the carriages of the moura

The speaker then pictured in touching words the love and affections of the dead for his aged mother and declared that what is needed in this world is more tribute of love and sorrow for the illustrious Endotph, who now romows his mon-ored corpse to the grave. Garfield, the christian statesman and patriot is not dead. Such men as Washington, and Lincoln and Garfield do not die. The bady of Garfield may be decaying, but his soul has not passed away. He lives, and will continue to encourage struggling young men. Young men, go home with the thought in your hearts to emulate James A. Garfield. He became great in spite of obstacles. In concluding his feeling oration, the Doctor addressed ance of preparing at once for the life before them, that they may become use-THE MEMORIAL.

The chairman presented Elder N. S. Haynes, chairman of the committee on resolutions, who read the following testimonial, which, on motion, was adopted the people silently bowing their heads in approval of the sentiments expressed:

The citizens of Decatur, assembled to give some public expression of our protound sorrow at the natimety death of our late president.

Ho, respors of life's barvest,
Why stand with rusty blade,
Until the night draws round thee
And day begins to fade?
Why stand ye idle, waiting
For respers more to come?
The golden morn is passing,
Why sit yeldie, dumb?

Thrust in your sharpened sickle
And gather in the grain,
The night is fast approaching,
And soon will come again.
The Master onlis for respers,
And shall He call in vain?
Shall sheaves its there ungathered,
And waste upon the plain? Mount up the heights of wisdom.

And crush each error low;
Keep back no words of knowledge

A BRAUTIFUL CERZHONY.

Then followed a beautiful memorial cert-mony in which 88 school missen, representing the states of the Urion, participated. Each young girl was dressed in white, and wore crape sashes, on which was pinned the name of the state represented. The states were called in the order of their admission into the Union, Virginia first and Colorado last. The scriptural and poetical selections recited were appropriate to the occasion, and at the close of each recital, each young lady deposited a beau, tiful floral offering in front of the stand—her dead. Then its mate glared the same fate, then Fran Strauss' collar, then not another scrap of starched linen on which to conclude the composition. His own linen was limp colored calico—no hope there. Johann became frantic. He was much the worse for having been allowed to write three-quarters of the walt. He was just on the point of dashing off home like a madman, when another happy thought struck Fran Strauss. She plunged her hand into a capacious pocket, fished out a purse, opened it, and displayed to his delighted gaze a brand new hundred guiden note. Hurrat! The entire finale
